GREAT CROWDS GREET TAFT IN HOME STATE

President Humorous and Sarcastic by Turns as He Refers to Roosevelt, and Hearers Laugh in Sympathy.

CLAIMANT IS ALSO ON STUMP IN OHIO

Declares He Is Only Making War on Crooks, Political, Financial and Otherwise; Attacks the Executive.

JOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, May 14. "I am here to ask you to do justice and give a square deal to an administration of the govrement of the United States by an Ohio man. I do not ask any favors because I am an Ohio man, but I ask justice. And I do not know any place in which I can make that appeal with more force and more right than in the home of that great Ohio president, who was my friend and my benefactor, William

That was the appeal that formed the mainstay of President Taft on the secend lap of his campaign tour of Ohio. He based his appeal for support in next Tuesday's primaries largely upon the achievements of his administration and the danger he said lay in the re-nomination and re-election of Colonel Roose

The president began the day in East Liverpeol and made his last speech here tonight.

Humorous References.

Although Mr. Taft's arguments were not greatly different from previous days there were many incidents that brought a smile to his face and the faces of others who heard him,

The president himself created amuse ment for his hearers at Akron when he took up his discussion of the bosses and made his usual reference to Mr. Roosevelt's relations with them his elephant gun and get after any bosses, 's said the president. 'I may be puzzle-witted,' he said at Canton.' That is a question that you cannot discuss any more than you can discuss any more than you can discuss whether you are good looking or not. But whether I am puzzle-witted or tot I know the difference between truth and fiction. I know what a square deal is and I know that he doesn't resident to write a note to the students of that city high school. Here is what the president wrote: "I didn't see Mr. Roosevelt get out deal is and I know that he doesn't resemble Abraham Lincoln in any re-

Asks Fair Play.

"I hope that when you go back Salinville station, where an unscheduled you will go over the facts that I have stated, and then examine, so far as you may, other sources of information. Listen to Mr. Roosevelt's speeches and see how he specifies; how many indictments he draws on facts and how many are mere assertions that have no foundation in fact and no specifications. Weigh it all; and then if von believe that you ought to support me there is no reason why you should not support me, a son of Ohio."?

At Massillon he made a spech to everal hundred school children. Once or twice the president took up eciprosity and told the farmers that e was still of the opinion that it would have been a good thing for them and the country.

Bain interfered with the president's speeches at Massillon, Barberton and Akron. All day the crowds were big enough to please the president, and the demonstrations and applause frequent.

Discusses Payne Law.

At East Liverpool, the president in his first speech of the day said:

"As for your pottery business, the Payne tariff law made certain provisions to prevent frauds in the introduction of pottery into this country by under value so as to secure to you the opportunity of having such protection as you needed, and it meant to you the prosperity of all your potteries in this neighborhood."

At Wellsville, President Taft spoke

CANTON, O., May 14.—Colonel Roosevelt tonight, in his first speech in this state prior to the Ohio primaries, said that it was his desire to open the campaign in the home of the late President McKinley.

He renewed his attack on President Taft and the men directing the president's campaign. He referred to Senator Lorimer of Illinois as "Mr. Taft's lieutenant." He strongly criticised Representative William B. McKinley, manager of Taft's campaign, for referring, the colonel said, in a public statement to the men who opposed President Taft in the Maryland campaign as "the rabble of the cities." In part, he said:

"We who stand for real progress within the Republican party have been accused of preaching discontent and class hatred. I do not believe that even those who made the accusation believe what they assert.

More Bombs Exploded.

At 11:25 o'clock two more dynamite cartridges were exploded and a portion of one wall toppled over. Nevertheless, the bandits succeeded in finding shelter in what remained of the structure.

Undaunted and probably unharmed by builet and dynamite. Garnier was still fighting for life at midnight with his confederate, Vallet.

All the forces for the protection of society had failed to dislodge them. Several thousand police, gendarmes and zouaves tried for hours to shoot the bandits or blow up the building with explosives. Three policemen had failen plosives. Three policemen had faller from the desperadoes' bullets, but though the villa was damaged by dynamite the bandits held their own and showed no signs of surrendering.

Garnier's Specialty.

Priends, I hold that this is infinitely more than a mere factional fight; I hold that this is infinitely more than an ordinary party contest. I insist that we who stand for the principles of progressive Republicanism, and who therefore stand for making the principles of Abraham Lincoln living principles applied to the living issues of today, are fighting the cause, not only of sound Republicanism, but of good citizenship.

"I believe that the constitution was conceived by the representatives of the people and adopted by the people, so that the people themselves, without compulsion, could, as is set forth in the preamble of the constitution, better obtain justice for themselves and better promote the general welfare. Our opponents believe that the constitution is something that does not spring from the common people, the plain people: that, on the contrary, it has been imposed upon them, and that they are to be compelled to submit to it even against their will.

"We, the People." Unlike Bonnot, whose refuge was dynamited at Choley-le-Rol, Garnier made his last stand in a house hidden by follage and surrounded closely by other buildings, making an assault difficult and dangerous. Bonnot and Dubois fought in a garage, which could be approached from all sides. Bonnot, the "demon chainfeur," was remarkable for his skill at the wheel of automobiles, by the employment of which the hand committed outrages and made their escape. Garnier's specially was disguise. He went so far as to mutitate his cycling to change his appearance, and by resorting to every scheme exploited in detective fiction, he succeeded in evading the police dragnet

Again as in the case of the battle at Cholsy-le-Rol, the efforts of the police and military were greatly hampered by the vast throngs that gathered in the adjoining streets. Attempts were made to blow up the building by throwing dynamite cartridges from the adjacent viaduct and a perfect hall of builets was thrown into the house.

The police and troops sent volley after volley of shots into the ruins of the building.

Some of the buillets ricochetted from the bricks, while others emerged on the opposite side, the result of which was that two policemen were wounded. Then an armed force holding torches rushed into the ruins and discovered the two bandits on the floor in a room.

Garnier was naked save for a few tattered rags. He appeared to be dead. Vallet was dying.

Bodies Dragged Out.

When the bodies of the desceradoes were dragged into the open the thousands of spectators pressed forward and tried to tear them from the troops. Automobiles were brought up and the bodies thrown in, but for a few minutes it was found impossible to start the machine.

One of the most dramatic moments of the battle was when during a lull in the bring, the woman Vuillemin stepped from the building and surrendered, leaving the men to fight for their lives.

Vallet died in the automobile which was conveying him to a Paris hospital. A policeman and a soldier who were the first to enter the villa saw Garnier with a mattress rolled around his body, the hand holding a revolver. The bandit was still firing, but he must have soon expired for when they threw themselves on him and unrolled the mattress the man was dead.

G. A. R. VETERANS TO RIDE IN AUTOS

Acting upon the suggestion of Colonel M. M. Kaighn, chairman of the decorations committee of the local G. A. R. Memorial day exercises, the automobile committee of the Commercial club has appointed Joseph Wirthlin, H. H. Bertram, W. S. Monigomery and R. M. Breeden as a sub-committee to arrange for automobiles to convey the veterans from their headquarters in the business center to the cemeteries on Decoration day. This action was taken at a meeting of the committee yesterday. It is expected that more than 200 automobiles will be furnished to the civil war veterans. The cars will convey the "old boys" to the cemeteries. The return will be made on street cars, according to the plans of the Memorial day committee.

Our opponents are the enemies of the constitution in spite of all their lip loyality to it when they invert its true meaning by the refinements of stroncy logic.

port pressessive candidates and all progressive measures.

There was not a dissenting voice opposed to the motion to adopt this report, and the convention subscribed to it with almost remarkable alterity and fervors.

Chairman C C. Richards announced realiness for nominations for delegates to the national Democratic convention to be held at Ballimore, June 25. Immediately there was a claimor for recognition, and with rare tact in face of the numerous demands for his attention, the chairman judiciously threaded his way through what threatened to be a taugle. When nominations were declared closed the following persons had been named candidates for national delegates.

J. D. Call, T. H. Fitzgerald, Colbert L. Olson, Solon Spire, A. L. Brewer, C. P. Overfield, John W. Burton, Joseph E. Cardon, William M. Roylance, E. M. Brown, John McAndrew, John R. Barnes, John S. Bransford, Thomas N. Taylor, C. C. Nesien, Alma Greenwood, George C. Whitmore, Samuel Russell, Henry W. Gwilliams, Mrs. H. J. Hayward, H. L. Nielsen, H. C. Lund, John T. Hodson, John Dern, Clarence T. Robertson—twenty-five in all.

In the balleting for national delegates the counties voted as units, with the exception of Sall Lake county. It was found that the city delegations were so tangled in their preferences that the rules were suspended and the city districts were individually called. This proceeding resoluted in aggravating delay and occasionally a great deat or disturbance in the hedy of the house. Chairman Richards was worked to almost the limit of endurance in the ensuing turmoit, but he exercised a wonderful patience and forbeating up to delay a decisive issue and announcement.

Result of Contest.

On account of the two methods of roting the tellers were some time in figuring up results of the ballot, but in the end the successful candidates for national delegateships were announced as follows, the vote attained by each being appended to the name:

No Instructions.

Chairman C. C. Richards was about to declare the convention's business completed, when L. R. Martineau attempted to make a motion the effect of which would have been to eventually get the sense of the convention as to its preference in the matter of presidential candidates. However, the delegates had been previously advised of Mr. Martineau's object and he had scarcely uttered a dozen words when he was shouted down. He persisted in his effect to make himself heard, but the convention would have no such proposition as committing itself, and thereby practically instructing its national delegation. As soon as one delegate could get the attention of his shouting fellows he moved that Mr. Martineau's motion be tabled, which was done with promptitude and a Democratic yell.

Chairman Richards entertained and quickly put a motion to dissolve, which carried, and he declared the convention adjourned sine die.

Grabette gave his age as twenty-nine years

Late yesterday afternoon a message from the girl was delivered to Mrs. Lords at her home in Sandy. It informed the mother that by the time she received the note her daughter would be Mrs. Louis Grabette and would be on her way to Denver to spend her honeymoon. Mrs. Lords almost fainted upon receiving the message and immediately notified the marshal at Sandy, who in turn reported the elopement to the local police. Chief of Police Grant ordered a search of all rooming houses and hotels last night, hoping to discover the runaway couple still in the city. At a late hour no trace had been found of them. Also he wired to Denver, asking that the couple be detained if found there.

The delegates were entertained at luncheon at Hotel Utah and afterwards enjoyed automobile rides to the beauty spots of the city.

In the evening a variety musical programme was given at K. of C. hall in their honor, in which All Hallows band made a decided hit. Irish step dancing by J. J. Maboney and Timothy O'Connor was a novelty very much appreciately.

A light luncheon followed the entertainment and conduced an important day in knighthood.

The bride was presumed by her parents to be attending the grade school at Sandy when the message telling of the clopement was received. The girl left her home in the morning, taking her lunch as usual. She was seen to board a car for Salt Lake at 10 o'clock. Two hours later she entered the county clerk's office, accompanied by Grabette.

Mr. Eldredge, the license clerk, says he noted the girl's childish appearance and questioned her closely regarding her age. She maintained stouty that she was eighteen last March and that her parents had given full consent to the marriage.

'CREATION" TO BE GIVEN IN OGDEN

While the music committee of the Commercial club yesterday decided to in definitely postpone the production of Haydn's oratorio, "The Creation" by the University of Utah Music society chorus, prominent soloists of the city and a complete symphonic orchestra, the production will be given in Ogden next Friday night as originally planned. Squire Coop, director of the orchestra and chorus, makes the following statement:

"The annuling of the performance of "The Creation," set for Wednesday night at the Salt Lake theater, does not in any way after or interfere with the performance at Ogden Friday night.

"The entire company will go to Ogden Friday as arranged.

"The orchestra is hereby notified that the rehearsal set for this morning at 10 o'clock at the university will be held."

The Weber club of Ogden, through its secretary, extends to Mr. Coop the following evidence of the appreciation in which hig work for the uplift of music is held: University of Utah Music society chorus,
